Data Flow Diagram

Automated Passenger Boarding Kiosk: how data moves from inputs to the boarding decision (technology-neutral)

Inputs are read once. Their text, faces and objects are extracted, the passenger is found on the manifest by ticket number, and five independent validations each produce TRUE or FALSE. Validation results drive the kiosk message and are written back to the manifest. Emotion and sentiment from the video become a feedback record that does not affect boarding. Everything is archived.